 The last night before vacation, there were only two girls left in a wing in Smithwood. One of them went down to the shower; the other one stayed in the room and locked the door. The other girl had taken her key with her to the shower. The girl in the room heard a scratching on the door and a guttural type of sound. She was scared and did not open the door. Soon the sound stopped.
 She went to bed and fell right asleep. She woke up the next morning and her roommate was not there. So she opened the door, and her roommate was lying dead in the hall. She had slipped and slit her throat with a razor blade.
